A CAUTION TO CONCERTED YOUNG MEN.

A young medical student from Michigan, who had been attending lectures in this city for some months past, and considered himself exceedingly good looking, knowing and fascinating, made a dead end upon the heart and fortune of a blooming young lady who was boarding in the same house with him. They were married on a Wednesday morning. That same afternoon the "young wife" sent for a d exhibited to the astonished student a "beautiful little daughter," three and a half years of age.

"Good heavens! then you were a widower!" exclaimed the astounded young man.

"Yes, my dear, and this is Amelia, my youngest. To-morrow Augustus, James and Reuben, will arrive from the country, and then I shall have all my darlings together once more."

The unhappy youth replied not a word. His feelings were too deep for utterance. The next day the "other darlings" arrived. Reuben was six years old, James nine, and Augustus a natty boy of twelve. They were delighted to hear that they had a "new papa," because they could now live at home, and have all the playthings they wanted!

The new papa, as soon as he could speak, remarked that Augustus and James did not resemble Reuben and Amelia.

"Well, no," said the happy mother, "my first husband was quite a different style of man from my second—complexion, temper, color of hair and eyes, all different."

This was too much. He had not only married a widow, but her third husband, and the astounded step-father of four children. "But the fortune," he thought, "that will make amends. He speaks of her fortune!"

"These are my treasures!" said she, in the Roman matron style, pointing to her children. The conceit was now quite taken out of the young Michigan man, who, finding that he had made a complete goose of himself, at once retired to a farm in his native state, where he could have a chance to render his "boys" useful, and make them sweat for the deceit practiced upon him by their mother.—N.
